Five Generation Family

Mrs. Maggie Ferguson Bryant, of Vera, shown seated above, is a great-great grandmother. Her daughter, granddaughter, great-granddaughter, and great-great-granddaughter paid her a visit not long ago and posed for this five-generation photo. The Bryants' eight children are all living in this area; Hattie, Gladys, Willie, Alfred, Robert Lee, Charlie, Lloyd, and Thelma. It is interesting to note that Mrs. E. T. Harris, the grandmother in the center of the of the picture above, is still in her thirties. From left to right, above, are Mrs. E. T. GOLDWATER — BYRD — ABBITT
ON NOVEMBER 3

Your vote for Goldwater as the Republican nominee for President, does not affect your right to vote for Senator Byrd and Congressman Abbitt in this and future elections. This is a right safeguarded for you by Virginia law, as officially interpreted by Attorney Generals of Virginia for 30 years. (See Att'y. Gen's. Reports for 1928-9, 1938-9, 1952-3, 1960-1 and 1962-3).

Goldwater Speaks Out For A Stronger America

Government Bureaucracy

"Our tendency to concentrate power in the hands of a few men deeply concerns me. We can be conquered by bombs or by subversion; but we can also be conquered by neglect — by ignoring the Constitution and disregarding the principles of limited government.

"I am convinced that most Americans now want to reverse the trend. I think that concern for our vanishing freedoms is genuine, I think that the people's uneasiness in the stifling omnipresence of government has turned into something approaching alarm. But bemoaning the evil will not drive it back, and accusing fingers will not shrink government."

States Rights

Barry Goldwater knows that government to be responsive must be close to the people.

"There is a reason for the (the Constitution's) reservation of States' Rights. Not only does it prevent the accumulation of power in a central government that is remote from the people and relatively immune from popular restraints; it also recognizes the principle that essentially local problems are best dealt with by the people most directly concerned. Who knows better than New Yorkers how much and what kind of publicly-financed slum clearance in New York City is needed and can be afforded? Who knows better than Nebraskans whether that State has an adequate nursing program? Who knows better than Arizonans the kind of school program that is needed to educate their children?

"The people have long since seen through the spurious suggestion that federal aid comes free. They know that the money comes out of their own pockets; and that it is returned to them minus a broker's fee taken by the federal bureaucracy. They know, too, that the power to decide how that money shall be spent is withdrawn from them and exercised by some planning board deep in the caverns of one of the federal agencies. They understand this represents a great and perhaps irreparable loss — not only in their wealth, but in their priceless liberty."

Labor

Barry Goldwater is not afraid to challenge vested interestes, either in management or labor. He has challenged "bossism" everywhere.

"The labor movement was born out of the threat of the loss of freedom through excesses of overbearing business monopolies. It has served well to bring the pendulum back from the extreme. I believe that unionism, in its proper sphere, accomplishes a positive good for the country.

"But the pendulum has now swung too far in the opposite direction and we are faced, as a people, with the stern obligation to halt a menacing misappropriation of power before it completely engulfs the liberties of labor management and the general public."

Social Security

Barry Goldwater wants to safeguard the 'security' in social security.

"I favor a sound Social Security system and I want to see it strengthened. I want to see every participant receive all the benefits this system provides. And I want to see these benefits paid in dollars with real purchasing power.

"Social Security is a system of basic protection for the aged. In addition, most Americans now participate in private pension plans while many have their own savings and investment; Social Security was never intended to replace these voluntary programs. Its prime purpose was and is to supplement them to provide a basic floor. I am convinced it can do this job, the job for which it was created.

"Essentially, protection against need in America depends upon a free economy which produces an ever-growing abundance and an ever-greater opportunity for all. In this framework, I believe Social Security has a vital and legitimate supporting role."

Civil Rights

Barry Goldwater wants equal treatment for all Americans, but preferential treatment for none.

"The right to vote, to equal treatment before the law, to hold property, and to the protection of contracts are clearly guaranteed by the 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution. These rights should be rigorously enforced. Existing law demands it.

"In the schools, the Attorney General already has the authority through court decrees to effect integration. But if more authority must be granted, we should write a law that is tightly drawn, that can be used like a rifle, not a shotgun.

Fiscal Responsibility

Barry Goldwater believes that the first fiscal responsibility of the Federal Government is to preserve the value of the dollar.

"Government must do everything within its power to guarantee a sound dollar. It can do this by reasonable budgets, by living within the means of the people who pay the bills, and by encouraging the individual enterprise from which the real value of money is formed.

"We need clearly stated and clearly understood priorities for national programs. We cannot do everything at once and there are many things the Federal Government should not try to do. Local governments much take on more and not less responsibility in meeting needs when those needs are fully established."

He will trim unnecessary and unwarranted Federal spending.

"Let us, by all means, remember the nation's interest in reducing taxes and spending. The need for economic growth that we hear so much about these days will be achieved, not by the government harnessing the nation's economic forces but by emancipating them. By reducing taxes and spending we will not only return to the individual the means with which he can assert his freedom and dignity, but also guarantee to the nation the economic strength that will always be its ultimate defense against foreign foes."
